ABOUT GIRAAVARU ISLAND

A Unique History

The resort island is known locally as Giraavaru Island (pronounced Gear-ava-roo) and is located in North Malé Atoll just over 15 minutes from Velana International Airport. The capital Island of Malé is vaguely visible from the island.

Giraavaru was seemingly inhabited by the earliest island community of Maldives, thought to be descendants from the ancient Tamil people of the Malabar Coast, presently known as Kerala.

The Giraavaru people had their own distinctive culture and style and until the twentieth century the Giraavaru people displayed recognisable linguistic and cultural differences to the population of the nearby islands. Their folklore heritage has sustained in the forms of songs and dances, however, their custom and cultural specificities quickly assimilated into Malés culture as they were moved to the island of Hulhulé and subsequently Malé in the late 1960s.

Centara Ras Fushi Resort & Spa Maldives greatly values Giraavaru history and prides itself in reflecting said culture throughout the resort.

A: Our house reef, on the south-eastern side of the island, is home to abundance of marine life, all of which can be accessed directly from the beach or designated individual water villas.
- Q: What marine life can I expect to see at the resort?
A: Centara Ras Fushi Resort & Spa Maldives features an excellent house reef that almost circles the resort. The island is surrounded by some of the most astonishing marine life and coral found in Maldives.

Some of the fabulous species that you might see when snorkeling the house reef include:

Fish

There is an amazing diversity of sea life in the Maldives archipelago, with corals and over 2,000 species of fish, ranging from colourful reef fish to reef sharks, moray eels and a wide variety of rays: Manta Ray, Stingray and Eagle Rays. Around the house reef you can expect to see Powder Blue Surgeon Fish, Parrot Fish – so called for their sharp beaklike teeth which they use to chip away at the corals, Gold Stripped Emperor, Blue Lashed Butterfly fish and of course...Nemo.

Around 70 different species of colourful coral reefs make up the flora of this underwater city with more than 700 species of fishes and other forms of marine life taking the role of the fauna. Reefs prevent soil erosion. And with their brilliant hues and sculpted shapes corals add beauty, enticing people to dive underwater to appreciate some of nature's most magnificent creations. Corals constitute a very delicate ecosystem, which requires our tender care and nurturing.

You may also anticipate seeing Sea Turtles including Loggerhead, Green Olive Ridley and Hawksbill. These can be found swimming around the reef or in open seas, however, green sea turtles, are one of very few creatures that eat the sea grass growing on the sea floor. Sea grass must be kept short to remain healthy, and beds of healthy sea grass are essential breeding and development areas for many species of fish and other marine life. A decline or loss of sea grass beds would damage these populations, triggering a chain reaction and negatively impacting marine and human life.

Some of the fabulous species that you might see whilst diving:

North Male Atoll

This area was one of the first to be discovered for its scuba diving delights and comprises some of the oldest and most popular dive sites in the Maldivian Island, including Gaathugiri, also known as Banana Reef. You can expect breathtaking topography with magnificent rock faces, numerous caves, steep drop offs and precipitous overhangs. The marine life is just as overwhelming with sharks, manta rays, black snappers, grouper, schooling banner fish, large morays, squirrelfish, soldier fish and Maldivian grub fish.

Whale Sharks

Probably one of the most unique species of fish is the Whale Shark. Most would assume due to their name and features that they are from the shark family. The Whale shark is a slow-moving filter feeding shark that is the largest living fish species. It can grow up to 12.2 metres in length and can weigh up to 13.6 tonnes. They are found in the tropical and warm oceans and can live up to 70 years. The species are thought to have originated about 60 million years ago. Although whale sharks have very large mouth, they feed mainly, though not exclusively, on plankton, microscopic plants and animals. Despite its enormous size this specie does not pose any significant danger to humans. It is a frequently cited example when educating the public about the popular misconceptions of all sharks as "man-eaters". They are quite gentle and can be playful with divers. Divers and snorkelers can swim with this giant fish without any risk apart from unintentionally being struck by the shark's large tail fin.

Manta Rays

There are few sights more awe-inspiring for scuba divers than watching manta rays performing their graceful somersaults. These magnificent creatures are frequently seen feeding alone or in small groups near the surface or eventually near shore waters or coral and rocky reefs. Manta rays are strong pelagic swimmers; possibly able to cross the open ocean and so often host one or more clinging remora, or sucker fish. Remoras have their first dorsal fin modified into a sucking disc. While the remoras do not harm their host directly (apart from sore skin where attached), mantas do use more energy in swimming with them.
