Homemade Ingredients

To give our guests the best cocktail experience, we have made quite a few unique homemade ingredients that might be unfamiliar to you.

Shrub

The word shrub is derived from the Arabic word sharab, which means “to drink.” These syrups, common in colonial America, were used to make delightful drinks. Cocktail shrubs combine water, fruit, sugar and vinegar to create an acidic syrup that adds depth and complexity when mixed into a cocktail. They were initially used to help preserve fruit back in the days when refrigeration was not available. They are used in small quantities in some of our cocktails to give a fruity, sweet & acidic balance.

Sherbet

This mixer is a combination of fresh lemon juice and oleo saccharum. Oleo saccharum is Latin for “oil-sugar” and is the name given to the syrup by using sugar’s absorption properties to extract the natural oils from citrus fruits and mixing it with the fresh juice. This produces a much more fragrant and flavourful citrus that we use in our cocktails.

Cellulous

Cellulous is obtained from natural plant fibres. We use cellulous as a replacement for egg white that is used in classic cocktails. Cellulous is vegetarian and vegan friendly and does not flavour or aroma, but just add texture and a skilly mouthfeel to our cocktails.
